

REASONABLE AND CUSTOMARY CHARGES

The fees for certain services may vary from one provider to another, and even from one Canadian province to another.

Insurance companies monitor market charges to establish a list of “reasonable” charges for every service, which corresponds to the average cost of a particular treatment.

The established amounts represent the maximum reimbursement made by the insurance company for a given service. If your provider charges more than the established amounts, you must pay the difference.

To find out about the services covered by your plan, consult your Member Portal.
